Give the Gift That Truly Keeps on Giving To Your 2006 College Graduate – The Perfect Resume

- ResuMAYDAY Offers Resume/Career Coaching Graduation Package -

CHICAGO, May 4, 2006 ResuMAYDAY, a corporate outplacement and resume writing firm serving executives and high-level professionals, has unveiled its Graduation Package, the ideal present for a 2006 college graduate about to enter the working class. The package includes resume writing, interview skills training and a career coaching session.

The most comprehensive graduation package geared for the soon-to-be professional, ResuMAYDAY's compilation of professional services is truly the gift that every young graduate needs, but far too often is the one that the same graduates don't necessarily know they need. The package costs less than similar programs but offers a more personalized, tailored approach.

"So many of today's young graduates get out of school and have been counseled along the way about entering the workforce, either from friends or family," said Lauren Milligan, founder of ResuMAYDAY, based in suburban Chicago. "Yet many employers report that today's college graduates are not as prepared to enter the employment market as 10 or 20 years ago."

ResuMAYDAY works with job seekers but also small to mid-sized companies throughout the country, offering outplacement services in downsizing situations. The firm offers a complimentary consultation prior to resume writing for all clientele.

In addition, services include cover letter and other writing, career assessment consultations and interview skill sessions – a skill that most graduates lack.

"Our mock interviewing process is really the most valuable thing for a graduate, beyond crafting a well-written resume that accurately portrays that person's professional goals and current skills," Milligan said.
